

NT101 New Testament Foundations I

Mr Quek Tze-Ming | 3CR

About the Course

NT Foundations I & II survey the entire contents of the NT. The student will be drawn into the world of the NT and encouraged to interact with the themes and messages contained within each piece of writing in the NT. In so doing, students can better examine the implications of the NT's message for Christians and for the Church today. NT Foundations I & II will be taught using a two-volume introduction to the New Testament entitled Exploring the New Testament, jointly published by IVP and SPCK.

This course, NT Foundations I (NT101), is a general introduction to the Four Gospels and Acts. Students can expect a survey of major interpretive approaches, as well as a consideration of historical and cultural issues. These include the Synoptic Problem and the literary relationship of the Gospels; the problem of the historical Jesus; the genre, historical setting, message, and structure of each of the Gospels and Acts.

About the Lecturer

Mr Quek Tze-Ming is a PhD candidate in New Testament Studies at the University of Cambridge. His special area of studies is in the use of the Old Testament in the New. After leaving legal practice, he served in student ministry with the Fellowship of Evangelical Students (Singapore). He then commenced theological studies, receiving a Dip. C.S. from BGST, an MDiv and a ThM from Regent College, Vancouver. He is married to Sharon, and they have two daughters. He serves in the teaching ministry of his church, and maintains a lively interest in local food, football, and movies.

Course Objectives

Upon completion of the course, it is hoped that the student will:

- i. be familiar with the historical, cultural and religious environment in which Jesus and his early followers lived, and so gain a greater understanding and appreciation of the message of Jesus of Nazareth in the setting of first-century Palestinian Judaism.
- ii. be able to articulate and appreciate the basic outlines, contents, and distinctive theological contributions of each of the Gospels and the Acts of the Apostle.
- iii. be familiar with, and be able to evaluate, the scholarly theories of relationships among the Synoptic Gospels (Matthew, Mark & Luke), and John.
- iv. be able to interact with critical approaches and methods used to interpret the Gospels and Acts.
- v. have a knowledge of the past and current state of Life of Jesus research.
- vi. be able to appreciate the ways by which time- and culturally-bound texts may yet be applied in today's cultural, ethical, and religious settings.
